Why Invest in Canadian Farmland?

Veripath is a Canadian alternative investment firm focusing on farmland.

Veripath believes that there are a number of factors that are supportive of the Canadian farmland investment premise, a few of which are highlighted below:

Inflation Hedging: Farmland has historically had strong inflation/stagflation hedging capabilities and outperformed in real terms during periods of low real rates/high inflation.

Value: Canada has some of the most competitively priced farmland in the developed world – particularly on a productivity adjusted pricing basis.

Diversification: Farmland exhibits low correlation to traditional stock/bond investments so can improve portfolio risk diversification.

ESG: Western Canadian zero-till portfolios capture material amounts of carbon.

Demand: Farmland is a non-volatile way to capture the anticipated incremental demand coming from population growth and growing demands for food, feed, fuel and water globally.

Speakers:

Stephen Johnston

Stephen has over 20 years' experience as a fund manager from the debt and private equity perspectives. As a senior fund manager at Société Générale Asset Management UK Stephen oversaw the private equity portion closed-end funds investing across all sectors in the emerging markets of the former Soviet Union, Eastern Europe, the Baltics and the Middle East. Stephen has been involved in multiple funds investing into the Canadian alternative space including strategies deploying capital into farmland, private credit, energy and SME PE. Stephen launched Canada's first RRSP/TFSA eligible farmland investment vehicle. Stephen has a BSc. (1987) and a LLB from the University of Alberta (1990) and an MBA (1994) from the London Business School.
