POC testing is a blood diagnostic procedure used to find cholesterol and blood clotting issues. This diagnosis aids doctors in assessing the possibility of thrombosis and severe internal bleeding, which can result in cardiac arrest. Cardiovascular POC also includes tests for troponin and brain natriuretic peptides to detect conditions such as coronary artery disease, myocardial infarction, and heart failure. Cardiac POCT considerably reduces the amount of time needed to retrieve reports and data. Most of the time, diagnosis reports are delivered an hour following test sample submission. Therefore, cardiac POC tests assist in significantly reducing turnaround time, enabling immediate patient response and efficient management of cardiac diseases.
