A nickel metal hydride battery is a defined as a type of rechargeable battery. A nickel metal hydride battery battery can simply have two to three times the capacity of an equivalent size NiCd, and also its energy density can approach that of a lithium-ion battery. Moreover, the chemical reaction at the positive electrode is similar to that of the nickel–cadmium cell (NiCd), with both using nickel oxide hydroxide (NiOOH). The negative electrodes use a hydrogen-absorbing alloy instead of cadmium. These batteries are made of standardized cylindrical forms, that are interchangeable with nickel-cadmium batteries and are made with the reaction between cadmium and nickel.
