Restoration, a family owned and operated disaster restoration company headquartered in Pompano Beach, Florida, reports servicing hundreds of homes months after Hurricane Ian devastated the Gulf Coast community.

Our disaster restoration services in Naples and Fort Myers continue today, with a focus on mold remediation in structures that weren't dried out immediately after the storm surge.”

Jordan Cohen

“We are grateful to all of our clients and communities we service throughout Collier and Lee County for trusting us in helping them recover and restore their homes and businesses after the devastation of Hurricane Ian. I'm incredibly proud of our Emergency Response crews who were on-site within 12 hours after the storm passed, working day and night to mitigate the damage in hundreds of structures from Naples to Fort Myers. Our disaster restoration services in Naples and Fort Myers continue today, with a focus on mold remediation in structures that weren't dried out immediately after the storm surge.”

CoreLogic, a global property data and analytics provider, reported its updated and final damage estimates for Hurricane Ian. According to the new data analysis, the total flood and wind losses are upwards of $70 billion. This estimate includes wind loss, re-evaluated insured and uninsured storm surge loss, and newly calculated inland flood loss for both residential and commercial properties.
