2022”, the vending machine operators market share is predicted to reach a value of $31.85 billion in 2022 at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 8.6%. The Russia-Ukraine war disrupted the chances of global economic recovery from the COVID-19 pandemic, at least in the short term. The war between these two countries has led to economic sanctions on multiple countries, surge in commodity prices, and supply chain disruptions, effecting many markets across the globe. The vending machine operators market is expected to grow to $38.92 billion in 2026 at a CAGR of 5.1%. Growing demand for on-the-go snacks, drinks, and others is expected to drive the vending machine operators market.

Key Trends In The Vending Machine Operators Market

The growing focus of players on introducing innovations is a leading trend in the vending machine operators market. Companies are focusing on using the latest technology like cashless payment, IoT, AI, and big data for enhancing sales, convenience, and procuring data to find customer preferences to increase productivity and customer satisfaction. For instance, over 2,000 Coca-Cola machines now accept Bitcoin in Australia and New Zealand. Coca Cola started experimenting with artificial intelligence and big data to build smart vending machines that need less human control. The beverage supergiant employed Hivery, a technology-driven company that works with businesses to refine their retail strategies using AI and big data, to revolutionise the way it marketed and distributed its goods in more than 200 countries. Starting with 60-odd vending machines in Newcastle, a town 160 km away from Sydney, the software company began experimenting with AI to see if it could stack vending machines better than humans could to maximise revenue and profits. The company developed an AI algorithm specifically for Coca-Cola, which resulted in an 18% reduction in re-stock visits plus a 15% rise in revenue, demonstrating that big data really can make a difference when it comes to vending machine optimization.
