Daniel Manning, CEO

“We spent our Christmas Eve as well as all day yesterday, dispatching emergency fire guards in the South, particularly in Alabama,” explained Dan Manning, the firm’s CEO.

It was reported that busted pipes, and frozen pipes, the water levels at Marbury Water System have been low. According to officials, the system’s emergency water connections, which provide water to citizens, were also running low. The system warned that their water tanks might be completely empty by Tuesday, resulting in no water being provided to customers until then.

Autauga County Alabama Fire Watch

The Alabama county of Autauga is located in the southern part of the state. It is near the state capital of Montgomery. It was established in 1818. In addition to its political importance, the county has also played a major role in the aboriginal history of the state. Another manufacturing development in the county was the Planters' Factory. Other industries include cotton production, brewing, and printing. There are many wells and creeks that supply water for the county. "If the water system goes down in Autauga, that has rippling effects in the surrounding areas", continued Manning.
