Market Overview:

According to WHO, the global annual incidence of SCI is 40-80 cases per million people. SCI patients have a higher mortality risk because they die prematurely 2 to 5 times more often than patients who do not have SCI. The vast majority of traumatic SCIs are the result of work or sports-related injuries. Furthermore, the growing geriatric population and the number of obese people frequently develop symptoms associated with spinal disorders such as spinal stenosis, driving demand for spinal implant surgeries and propelling market growth. Obesity can also aggravate an already existing low back problem and cause it to reoccur. Degenerative disc disease is one of the most common spine-related disorders among the elderly.

Spinal implants are instruments used during spinal surgery to facilitate fusion, stabilize, correct deformities, and strengthen the spine. The spinal implants are made of metals such as stainless steel or titanium and come in a variety of sizes depending on the treatment requirement. Hooks, cages, pedicles screws, plates, and rods are also included. There is a lot of research being done to improve implant outcomes.
