

Furniture manufacturer fiVO Design is Awarded Top Score in the 2022 Wood Furniture Scorecard

Wood Furniture Scorecard, is a joint initiative by National Wildlife Federation and Sustainable Furnishings Council to assess North American furniture brands.

ANDOVER, MASSACHUSETTS, UNITED STATES, January 3, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- fiVO Design ("fiVO"), an Andover, MA-based furniture designer and manufacturer, was awarded a Top Score in the 2022 Wood Furniture Scorecard, a joint initiative by the National Wildlife Federation ("NWF") and the Sustainable Furnishings Council ("SFC") that assesses North American furniture retailers on their wood sourcing policies. This year, 127 companies were assessed. fiVO was amongst the 14 who earned a Top Score.

fiVO Design's furniture embodies the concept of adaptable design as it can easily be reconfigured to adjust to life's twists and turns.

“Sustainability is at the core of our values, states Stewart Junge, US Navy Veteran, and fiVO’s owner. “The premise of our design is multi-functional pieces that can adapt as consumers’ spaces and needs change. We are redefining modular as our furniture is durable, not disposable. In addition to its beautiful modern aesthetic, it assembles without the use of any tools or hardware so it can quickly and easily be assembled and disassembled without losing parts or risking damage. This is furniture for life that should never end up in a landfill.”

Sustainability isn’t just a buzzword. It’s the future of design. As furniture manufacturers, we have a responsibility to implement best practices into our designs and manufacturing process.”

Deanna Junge, Director, fiVO Design

Globally, furniture manufacturers are the third largest wood consumers, behind the construction and the paper industry. The responsible harvest of wood supports healthy, thriving forests and sustainability. Both consumers and retailers contribute to the mission with their sourcing and purchasing decisions. The Scorecard features furniture retailers that demonstrate a willingness to help protect forests and contribute to a more sustainable future. The methodology focuses on wood-sourcing policies, goals, and practices. Both score and improvement year over year are acknowledged and awarded.

fiVO might be new to the furniture industry but is already proving to be a leader in sustainability. A new member of the SFC in 2022, fiVO actively contributes to public messaging about the importance of sustainability and responsible forestry practices. When presented with the opportunity to be assessed by the Scorecard, there was no question to “opt-in”. With just 6 companies scoring higher, fiVO is in the top 5% of all retailers that opted to be scored.

“Sustainability isn’t just a buzzword. It’s the future of design. As furniture designers and manufacturers, we have a responsibility to implement best practices into our designs and manufacturing process. Our furniture is made of sustainably forested Birch wood and proudly manufactured here in the USA,” shares Deanna Junge, fiVO’s Director of Business Development.

As organizations like NWF and SFC establish and foster initiatives like the Scorecard, consumers continue to be educated about supply chain matters and the importance of buying from companies that are willing to stand up for these causes rather than chase the bottom line. fiVO is clearly a top choice for consumers looking to purchase furniture from a sustainability-minded manufacturer and retailer.
