EINPresswire.com/ -- Built in 1949 and once a printing press repair shop and auto parts and service center, Deep Ellum Art Company now has become a center of live music, art, and food and drinks with hundreds of people eagerly waiting to go to their events.

Deep Ellum Art Company, a famous indoor-outdoor hangout, has recently revealed the list of upcoming live music events featuring a number of local artists. Though live music will be the center of the events, it will not be the only entertainment. As a 5,000 square foot building surrounded by an even larger treed outdoor space, the dallas live music venue has a full bar measuring over 60 feet and multiple food trucks where it offers a wide menu of drinks and food. Currently, it offers 17 different beers and ciders, 7 draft cocktails, and 4 wines on tap. Apart from the live music, the events are worth going just to explore its rich and expansive menu of drinks and food.

The events will also feature exhibitions displaying street art and murals from dozens of local artists. Guests can buy these art pieces to support the artists. Accordingly, the venue has also encouraged local artists to take advantage of the many vending opportunities the events will provide. Deep Ellum will also host art classes for those who are intrigued and interested in learning the creative processes.

The venue has also gone to the extent of providing yard games for children so that no age group of visitors get left out or unentertained.

Speaking about the upcoming events, co-founder of the venue John LaRue said that, "As people who love art and music ourselves, when I started Deep Ellum with Kari, our biggest intention was to turn it into a place where local artists and musicians can showcase their product of their craft. It is so satisfying that we get to see the place doing exactly what we had in mind at a scale that is much bigger than what we could ever expect."
