Water recycling and reuse use a range of sources to recycle wastewater. It then processes it and uses it for various purposes, including irrigation of public parks, street cleaning, vehicle washing, etc.; agriculture; industry; dust management; recreation; environmental goals (recharging aquifers); and drinkable purposes (aquifer recharge for drinking water use).

Water Recycle and Reuse Market: Growth Drivers

Over the following years, the water recycling and reuse market is anticipated to be driven by non-potable applications of recovered water, including toilet flushing, agricultural irrigation, and industrial processes, as well as growing government programs for water conservation and recycling. Additionally, the market is anticipated to grow in the upcoming years due to the use of this water for building, concrete mixing, artificial lakes, paper mills, and other benefits.

Additionally, it is estimated that the necessity to enlarge the surface water reservoirs and fill groundwater aquifers with recycled water will drive the market throughout the projected time. However, some limitations and difficulties may prevent the market from expanding. The prospect of retaining the poisonous and dangerous compounds in the recycled water may constrain demand.

Regional Landscape

Asia Pacific is projected to witness tremendous growth in the Water Recycle and Reuse market in 2021. The main markets in APAC for water recycling and reuse are China and India. This region's market will expand more quickly than those in other areas. Due to the quick adoption of water recycling in sectors like oil and gas, construction, and heavy metal industries, the rapid development of water infrastructure in Australia, South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore, and Japan will facilitate the growth of water recycling and reuse market in APAC for the forecast period. Other countries contributing to the market's revenue include the US, Spain, and Germany.

Growth in the region is also aided by soaring demand for new facilities, upgrades to existing facilities, and a growing focus on stricter wastewater control requirements, particularly in China.
