Enter Steve Comisar who is best known for being the only former con man who is also a Hollywood actor.

Comisar was recently released from prison for fraud. He couldn't wait to get out so he could resume his promising acting career. Unfortunately, when Comisar called his agent and announced he was back home and ready to work again his phone never rang. Being bored and depressed for a few months Comisar decided to change course and do something positive to give back to society in an attempt at redemption for his past mistakes. So Comisar contacted Make-A-Wish and asked how he could help.

It's impossible to help another person without also helping yourself.”

see the longest running and most successful Broadway production in history. It will be a magical evening of entertainment and happiness that they will never forget. The 2 second row VIP tickets

Comisar says, "I've seen The Lion King at least 5 times, both on Broadway and at the Pantages Theater in Hollywood. Each time I see it I'm blown away. It's by far the best Broadway show I have ever seen. I can't wait to see the big smiles on those kids faces as they experience the magic for themselves. It's all about giving back and I'm excited about making my first contribution."

WWE superstar John Cena has granted close to 700 wishes. He holds the Guinness World Record for granting more wishes than any other celebrity on the planet. Cena is one of the most famous WWE wrestlers in history. He has starred in many big budget motion pictures, is a New York Times bestselling author, and the proud owner of an exotic sports car collection worth close to 100 million dollars.

Because Steve Comisar was in prison he knows what it feels like to be an underdog and lose hope. His empathy and compassion for the critically ill Make-A-Wish kids is why he is giving back by donating his VIP second row tickets to The Lion King. Comisar says, "The next time you feel like your life sucks just remember that there's people out there who wish they had your life."
