

Cutaway model of a 1962 Vickers VC-10 BOAC jet airplane is expected to soar in Miller & Miller's Jan. 21 online auction

There are several rare and desirable vintage airplane models in the auction (not all are cutaways). The Vickers VC-10, however, is the expected top lot.

NEW HAMBURG, ONTARIO, CANADA, January 9, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- A cutaway model of a 1962 Vickers VC-10 BOAC (later renamed British Air) jet plane, one of only two known to exist, made by Walkers Westway in England, is expected to soar to new heights in Miller & Miller Auctions, Ltd.'s online-only Advertising & Historic Objects auction planned for Saturday, January 21st, at 9 am Eastern time.

The eclectic sale is filled with 376 lots of advertising signs, banks, breweriana, bicycles, bottles, clocks, coin-ops, fruit jars, general store, historic objects, models, militaria, soda advertising and sports memorabilia. There are several rare and desirable vintage airplane models in the auction (not all are cutaways). The Vickers VC-10 is the expected overall top lot (est. $9,000-$12,000).

All estimates quoted in this report are in Canadian dollars. Also, all lots are being offered without reserve. Everything will be sold to the highest bidder.

"This is a diverse auction built on highlights from well-established Canadian collections," said Ethan Miller of Miller & Miller Auctions, Ltd. "After years of enjoyment, these uncirculated rarities will change hands. From general store advertising to fruit jars to cast iron coin banks, this sale will tantalize even the most advanced collectors. It is truly an auction not to be missed."

The Vickers VC-10 model is highly sought after by collectors for her beautiful lines and interesting history. The performance of the plane was such that it achieved the fastest crossing of the Atlantic by a subsonic jet airliner of 5 hours and 1 minute. The record held for 41 years, until Feb. 2020, when it was broken by a British Airways Boeing 747.

It became a standard airline industry marketing practice to woo customers by showing off cutaway models of their most exciting (and brand new) jets. Only the highest performing travel agencies were given the privilege of being "loaned" these models. The one in the sale was sent to a travel agency in 1963, where it sat nearly forgotten for over 50 years.

Early 20th century Calgary (Canada) Brewing & Malting Company poster on single-sided lithographed paper with great color, 33 inch by 45 inch frame (est. CA$4,000-$6,000).

Then, when the building it was kept in was sold in December 2021, she was rediscovered by the very same man who placed her there around the time of JFK's assassination. The only other Westway BOAC VC-10 known to exist doesn't have a cutaway view of the fore and aft cargo hold, nor does it sport landing gear, as the one in the auction does. The model in the auction is 88 inches long, 70 inches wide and 61 inches tall (with the stand).
