“We'll work closely with patients both before and after their implant surgery to ensure a successful treatment,” says Dr. Matthew Lang, dentist at DICE Dental in Bethlehem. “We also offer supplemental treatments to help improve successful surgeries.”

A dental implant procedure takes about six months. First, a screw is surgically placed into the jawbone to replace a missing tooth root. Healing will take around three to four months as the jawbone fuses to the implant and provides stability.

Once the jaw is healed, then the patient will receive an abutment which will hold the implant's crown, or covering. After a few more weeks of healing, the custom crown is placed. This crown gives the implant its natural look and finish. With proper care, an implant can last 15 to 20 years.

Dental implants in Bethlehem start at $850 and are available at all of DICE Dental's offices throughout Pennsylvania.
