"Work from home and hybrid represent about 80% of the market in terms of where work is performed for contact centers and support functions," says Michele Rowan, President of Work From Home Alliance. "Pre-pandemic, work from home was a staffing strategy. Now, it's the work environment of choice. Businesses are digging in, resetting company vision, and making the necessary refreshes to everything from onboarding through off-boarding," says

Rowan.

The 2023 Remote Working Summit in Dallas March 8-9 includes case studies shared by Fortune 1000 organizations, smaller breakout sessions for best practice exchange, panel discussions, and a variety of social and networking opportunities.

In addition, attendees will participate in and download the 2023 Remote Working Benchmarking Survey, a 40-point perspective on how companies are designing, deploying and supporting their long-range work from home and hybrid programs.

The 2023 Remote Working Summit is being held at the Hilton Park Cities Dallas on March 8-9.
