DOUGLAS, ISLE OF MAN, January 13, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Non Alcoholic Beer Market Value and CAGR

The non-alcoholic beer market size is projected to reach US$ 20.4 Bn in 2022, growing at a CAGR of 7.9% from 2023 to 2033. Non-alcoholic beer is the beer that contains very little to no alcohol. By law, non-alcoholic beers sold in the United States can contain alcohol by volume (ABV), but many brands claim to offer ABV. Non-alcoholic beers are typically brewed using one of four major methods: controlled fermentation, dealcoholization, dilution, or simulated fermentation. In all four scenarios, brewers use standard beer ingredients to maintain that familiar hoppy beer taste without the punch of alcohol. Various research activities have shown non-alcoholic beer to improve overall cardiovascular health. This is most likely due to the polyphenols found in these products, such as polyphenol xanthohumol, a hop-derived molecule. Drinking alcohol-free beer can help lower blood pressure, inflammation, and homocysteine levels.

Non Alcoholic Beer Market Growth Drivers and Risks

The non-alcoholic beer market is growing rapidly as people are looking for healthier alternatives to traditional alcoholic beers. The key drivers for the growth of the non-alcoholic beer market are increasing awareness about the benefits of consuming healthier options, population trends that favor drinking less alcohol, and increased demand from developed economies such as North America, Europe, and Asia-Pacific countries.

One risk is that the market may be flooded with low-quality products. Another risk is that consumers may switch to other types of drinks if they don't like nonalcoholic beer. Finally, brewers may not be able to profit from the market if it remains small.
