Celebrating 100 years of service to Los Angeles County youth, Camp Woodcraft is one of the longest-running and most inclusive summer camp programs in the nation, and is accredited by the American Camp Association (ACA).

Each year, Woodcraft Rangers supports more than 20,000 Los Angeles area youth through its afterschool and summer camp programs. Camp Woodcraft offers both individual student and family camp experiences starting June 9, running through the week of July 23. Due to the limited number of spaces available, earlier registration is recommended. "Summer camp has never been more important. After the years of pandemic-induced social isolation, all children deserve safe and supportive outdoor summer sleepaway experiences to grow, connect, and play together," says Helen Santos, Director of Outdoor Education and Camp Woodcraft. She designs the agency's nature-based learning programs and oversees trauma-informed and first-aid training for its counselors. Helen also holds a position on the ACA's Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Taskforce, and was instrumental in preparing national guidelines for summer camps to safely re-open following COVID-19 protocols.

"Woodcraft Rangers is honored to be Los Angeles' largest, longest-running and most diverse youth program guiding kids and teens as they explore purposeful paths in life," says Julee

Brooks, chief executive officer. “We rely on the generosity of our community for financial support, so that we can give Los Angeles youth and families, who otherwise would not be able to afford it, a chance to explore nature and create long-lasting friendships and positive memories.”
