During 2022, Crawford navigated FMLS through unprecedented challenges, including the changing landscape of real estate caused by the pandemic. Quickly moving to make real estate more accessible through virtual and remote technologies, Crawford helped pivot the organization to a robust growth mode through new partnerships and data share agreements.

This includes opening up a vast referral network and data sharing with other MLS’, including most of Florida, critical markets in Alabama and Tennessee, Colorado, Puerto Rico, Mexico, and Latin America. Lockbox reciprocity between MLS' was also added in 2022, making it easier for real estate agents and brokers to transact real estate throughout the region.

Crawford has been at the helm of FMLS since 2019 and has helped grow FMLS to become the fourth largest MLS in the country.
