Some Key Highlights From the Report

The cardiovascular surgery segment accounted for the largest market revenue share in 2021. The segment's revenue growth is attributed to the category's inclusion of a variety of anastomosis devices. Vascular anastomoses may be streamlined, resulting in a speedier and less invasive Coronary Artery Bypass Graft (CABG) surgery. Anastomotic devices may not only reduce the requirement for numerous elements that can result in suboptimal patient outcomes, such as extracorporeal circulatory support, induced hypothermic cardiac arrest, and aortic cross-clamping, but they may also make the procedure's mechanics easier for the practitioner.

The disposable segment accounted for the largest revenue share in 2021. The availability of a variety of disposable anastomotic items and increased market penetration are driving the segment's revenue growth. The majority of the significant players work in the disposable product manufacturing industry. These products reduce the risk of surgical site contamination, cross-infection, and other healthcare-related risks.

The hospital segment accounted for the largest revenue share in 2021. An important aspect driving this segment's revenue growth is the rising patient load brought on by the incidence of gastrointestinal, cardiovascular, and a variety of other ailments. The segment's revenue growth is also being driven by finance alternatives and simple access to therapy owing to enhanced hospital healthcare facilities.

Market in North America accounted for the largest revenue share in 2021. An important factor driving market revenue growth in this region is the significant number of market companies investing in anastomosis devices. For instance, among the most well-known startups in this area are Johnson & Johnson Private Limited, Artivion, Inc., and Medtronic. It is expected that the number of product launches will increase significantly as more biomedical businesses invest in the development of anastomosis-based surgical equipment in this area.

On November 13, 2020, GI Windows Medical Corp., a clinical-stage, privately-held medical device company leading new developments in anastomosis technology, announced the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) had granted Breakthrough Device Designation for the self-forming magnetic compression anastomosis device indicated for small bowel end to end anastomosis for ileostomy reversal or tissue resection.
