The global market for dental floss is forecast to grow due to the increasing prevalence of periodontal disease around the world. Periodontal diseases result mainly from inflammation and infections of the bone and gums that support and surround the teeth. According to the National Center for Biotechnology Information, a division of the National Institutes of Health (NIH), periodontal disease is common in both developed and developing countries. It affects around 20 to 50 percent of the global population.

The global market for dental floss is forecast to grow due to rising awareness about oral hygiene. The American Dental Association (ADA), for instance, promotes oral hygiene among Americans. The American Dental Association (ADA), recommends flossing your teeth daily to improve oral health, prevent tooth decay and gum disease, and reduce the risk of tooth decay.
