Market Definition of Butyric Acid Derivatives

Butyric acid is a combination of carboxylic acid and butanoates and butyrates. The production of the compound is done industrially by the fermentation of starch and sugar with the touch of putrefying cheese, which is followed by neutralizing the acid with the help of calcium carbonate. Butyric acid has properties to brace the expulsion of enzymes and stabilizes the microbiota, which in turn improves the digestion of the nutrients. Butyric acid is widely used as a raw material in animal feed stock for swine and poultry, chemical industry and for the production of biofuels.
