Automotive Trailer Market Dynamics:

In response to climate change and the increasing negative impacts of trucking on local air quality, many countries and regions around the globe have developed strategies and laws to improve the environmental performance of heavy-duty tractor/trailer fleets. To reduce emissions and fuel consumption, governments and private sector must work together.

Factors that are driving this growth include an increase in the demand for heavy truck trailers and an increase in the use of off-highway vehicles. The automotive trailer market is segmented into two categories—light and heavy duty trailers. The light duty trailers market is expected to grow at a higher rate than the heavy duty trailers market. This is primarily due to the increasing demand for smaller trucks, which are typically used with light duty trailers.
