First, a clean window enhances the appearance and curb appeal of a residential or commercial building. Second, it makes buildings more energy efficient because clean windows allow more natural light to enter the building, reducing the need for artificial lighting, and saving energy costs. Third, regular window washing can help to prevent the build-up of dirt, grime, and other substances that can damage windows over time, extending the life of the windows. Fourth, dust, pollen, and other particles can accumulate on windows and aggravate allergies and other respiratory problems. Lastly, a well-maintained building with clean windows can create a positive impression and show that the property owner or manager takes pride in their building and cares about the comfort of their tenants or customers.
