ISLE OF MAN, ISLE OF MAN, January 23, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Cold Pressed Juices Market Value and CAGR

Cold pressed juices are thought to be more nutritious and fresh than traditional processed juices, and they are frequently made with high-quality ingredients. As a result, the cold pressed juice market is expected to grow further in the coming years. The cold pressed juice market is expected to grow rapidly in the coming years, with an 8.5% compound annual growth rate (CAGR) from 2019 to 2025.

This expansion is being driven by rising consumer demand for healthier, more convenient beverage options, as well as the growing popularity of plant-based diets. The increasing global popularity of cold-pressed juices due to their high content of essential dietary nutrition, such as vitamins and minerals, can benefit the market. People's increased health consciousness is causing a shift in consumer preference for clean-labeled and natural beverages.

Cold Pressed Juices Market Growth Drivers and Risks

Several factors are expected to drive growth in the cold pressed juice market in the coming years. Among the key drivers of this market are: Growing consumer demand for healthier beverage options: Cold pressed juices are thought to be healthier than traditional juices because they are produced using a method that preserves more of the nutrients and enzymes found in fruits and vegetables. Cold pressed juices are becoming increasingly popular among health-conscious consumers. There is growing awareness about the benefits of cold pressed juices, such as their high nutrient content and ability to aid in digestion and weight loss.

However, there are some threats to the growth of the cold pressed juices market. Some examples are: Cold pressed juices are more expensive to produce than traditional juices because they require more raw materials and labor. Some customers may be put off by the high price of cold pressed juices. Competition from other healthy beverage options: Other healthy beverage options, such as smoothies, coconut water, and kombucha, compete with cold pressed juices in the market. This may limit the market growth of cold pressed juices.
