The travel insurance market refers to the market for insurance policies that provide coverage for financial losses incurred as a result of unexpected events during travel. These policies can cover a wide range of potential issues such as trip cancellation, medical expenses, lost or stolen baggage, and emergency evacuation. The travel insurance market is a growing segment of the overall insurance market, as more people are traveling both domestically and internationally. The COVID-19 pandemic has had a significant impact on the travel insurance market, as many people have canceled or postponed their travel plans due to travel restrictions and health concerns. Factors driving growth in the travel insurance market include increasing disposable income, a rising number of international travelers, and growing awareness of the benefits of travel insurance.

The market has been studied in order to prepare this Travel Insurance report. It was analyzed by
