Intracranial Stents Market

Intracranial stents are used to open blocked arteries in patients with intracranial stenosis and brain aneurysms. This procedure is relatively new for these conditions, and the long-term benefits of placing these stents alone are still being studied. Various studies, however, have accepted the potential of stent placement to reduce the risk of stroke in patients with symptomatic intracranial stenosis when compared to medical therapy alone. As a result, the market's growth will be accelerated over the forecast period.
