ATLANTA, GEORGIA, UNITED STATES, January 25, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ --

Wolf & Heron, a leadership development firm that leverages expertise in social psychology, influence, and facilitation, has announced the relocation of its headquarters to Atlanta, Georgia. Founder Stephanie Judd was also tapped to speak at a Leadership Lab sponsored by the Council of State and Territorial Epidemiologists (CSTE). The in-person event was designed for the public health staff members throughout the United States and hosted on January 4 at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

CSTE selected Wolf & Heron to help health department staff explore tools of coaching that can be used as effective leadership skills as well. The presentation focused on the key skill of making people feel seen, heard, and understood. Judd discussed the impact this skill can have on conversations (and relationships), common mistakes people make, and what to do instead. Participants attended the training to prepare for a practicum that brings together students at the Harvard School of Public Health with staff from health departments around the country.

This collaboration between Wolf & Heron and CSTE aligns with the firm's strategic move to relocate to one of the fastest growing regions in the U.S. The consultancy has worked with a diverse portfolio of clients from Fortune 100 companies to non-profits and large educational institutions. Originally headquartered in Buena Vista, Colorado, Wolf & Heron will continue to serve clients across the globe while fostering new partnerships with businesses from Atlanta's key industries.

“When we think about how we want to shape our brand and expand our services over the next five years, Atlanta is just a natural fit,” says Stephanie Judd, founder at Wolf & Heron. “We work with some very impactful businesses across North America and Europe, and I’m really looking forward to being a part of Atlanta’s diverse, international business community.”
