The agency’s latest announcement is in line with their commitment to helping small businesses thrive despite the challenging economic times.

In Boston and most other places in the country, small and medium-sized businesses continue to suffer the adverse effects of the ongoing health crisis. Digital marketing has been a common strategy for many to cope with the limited foot traffic in their physical stores or demand for their local services, but these often lead to inconsistent results.

The hyper effective campaign management by Stephen

Mullen Marketing seek to help business owners overcome these difficulties by putting their branded content on well-known online publishing channels. The agency uses a talented team of writers to craft the content in multiple formats, helping to bring maximum coverage for the businesses.

"I run Google Ads Management, Google Ad Campaign Setup & offer Google Ads Consultant for local business owners so they can focus on what they do best which is running their business & servicing customers without having to worry about where their next customers is coming from" says Steve Mullen, the agency's founder.

With their established industry connections and partnerships, the company is able to publish their clients' ads to the top of relevant search results on Google, Getting their clients right in front of buyer ready consumers looking for their product/service

For smaller businesses it can be tough and very costly competing against larger franchises and bigger companies, that's why Stephen axed the charge to a free strategy sessions so business owners know what to do and how to get ROI on their ad spend Fast.

As Stephen M adds, "We help you to reach your best clients by crafting meaningful targeted ads and placements. If there's a service you offer in a specific location, neighborhood or region, we help you get seen."
