Some Key Findings from the Report:

With the fastest revenue CAGR, the Type 2 diabetes sector is expected to generate considerable market revenue growth. Type 2 diabetes mellitus incidence is rising, and technological advancements are two primary drivers of revenue growth of the segment. In 2020, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) estimated that more than 37 million Americans had type 2 diabetes.

During the forecast period, the insulin pump segment is expected to have considerable revenue growth. The functionality and dependability of insulin pumps have increased because of technological breakthroughs. One development in Continuous Subcutaneous Insulin Infusion (CSII) technology is the integration of Continuous Glucose Monitoring (CGM) with the insulin pump. Currently, these insulin pumps with Artificial Intelligence (AI) integration can manage the algorithm that determines blood glucose level of the user and automatically administers insulin.

Over the forecast period, the clinics segment is expected to register a steady segment revenue growth in terms of revenue share. This is owing to increasing availability of point-of-care diabetes management devices in clinics, presence of skilled general practitioners and nurses, and accessibility of affordable medical treatments. Patients are relying more on diabetic clinics as a result of general practitioners expertise in understanding the mechanism of insulin and aiding in improved diabetes care. This factors is expected to drive revenue growth of the segment during the forecast period.
