Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show

Native American rights, Leo crosses the country with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show and ultimately risks his life for the people he has come to care for.

EXCERPT FROM THUNDER FALLS:

As the opening number struck its first notes, the curtain parted, and out rode Buffalo Bill on a white horse. He wore a long, pure-white beard, a spotless white cowboy hat, and a fine-looking white leather jacket with a long fringe that danced along in tandem with his prancing white horse. The crowd cheered as the star of the show waved.

Once in the center of the ring, he brought a megaphone to his mouth and announced, "Ladies and gentlemen, boys and girls, my name is Buffalo Bill. Welcome to Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show!"

A cheer exploded, causing Bill's horse to buck. "Whoa!" he said, settling his ride. "White Rocket is excited too!"

The story is thought-provoking, action-packed, and thoroughly unpredictable. Spiritual wisdom and guidance juxtaposed with an adventure component keeps readers both entertained and enlightened.”
