Award-Winning Artist, Kansiime Brian Lister, Captures Unfiltered Emotions in his "Roses in Black" Collection which he exhibits in Nothing compares."

Kansiime Brian Lister, a contemporary Ugandan-based artist, holds a bachelor's degree in International Business from Makerere University. He is known for his exceptional oil and acrylic figurative paintings that showcase the rawest human emotions.

With his latest collection "Roses in Black," Lister aims to shed light on the incomplete stories faced by African men and women, with a focus on women empowerment. Through his artistry, he captures the unspoken wisdom and emotions of black women and men, emphasizing the endless depth of their experiences.

In "Roses in Black," Lister presents a series of paintings that connect the history of Africa with modern-day Africa. In each piece, the use of green tints represents rebirth, growth, and new beginnings, depicted through the various skin tones of his subjects. A comparison of our history to our present day serves as a reminder of the journey and progress made.
