Gum Arabic Market: Restrictions

Abiotic factors, such as changes in the climate of countries where gum arabic is produced, are expected to slow down global growth. Another factor that could cause market retardation is political instability.

Gum arabic producers, Somalia and Sudan in particular, face many difficulties. As there will be less production, the market will suffer.

Chemical manufacturers also make synthetic substitutes for gum arabic's oil emulsification. They aren't as good or as reliable as gum arabic, but they can pose a threat to the gum arabic industry due to their low cost. The quality of these substitutes may be preferred by consumers over the cost.
