Additionally, the report offers a brief synopsis of rival companies as well as particular growth opportunities with significant market drivers. The research includes a thorough evaluation of the Artificial Retina market, split by companies, regions, types, and applications.

An artificial retina is an implant that consists of an array of microelectrodes and is used for people who are blind due to retinal diseases. The advancement of artificial retina is to restore limited vision, allowing people to read while moving and recognise individuals.

Artificial retina has proven to be a game changer in the medical device industry, giving hope to a large number of visually impaired patients worldwide. Retinal implants hold the promise of restoring vision through the use of tiny prosthetic devices that capture light, convert it into electrical signals, and then stimulate the neurons in the retina, allowing the brain to form an image. Retinal implants are typically used in multi-specialty hospitals, ophthalmic clinics, and research institutes to treat AMD and RP.
