McDevitt's petition for better environmental practices is a call for companies to adopt ethical and sustainable practices in the way they conduct their operations. The petition highlights the importance of companies being responsible for their impacts on the environment and society. He believes in making a world more sustainable by starting with the products that are hurting our environment. Through strategic investment strategies, Mike has recently opened up on his newfound sustainability as he gears away from harmful toxins.

Some of the specific issues that McDevitt addresses in his petition include the use of harmful chemicals in the production process, the exploitation of workers, and the lack of transparency in supply chains. He argues that companies have a responsibility to ensure that the products they sell are produced in a way that is safe for both workers and consumers, and that they should be held accountable for any negative consequences of their operations. Growing up in Maryland taught Mike a lot about what it means to invest in the things that you believe in and through significant success, he has had the opportunity to be mindful of the business decisions he makes on a daily. With investors and major business leaders like Mike, we have a better opportunity to change the standardized procedures and swap harsh chemicals for a more ethical solution.

McDevitt also emphasizes the importance of companies being transparent about their practices and taking steps to mitigate their impact on the environment. He argues that businesses have a responsibility to reduce their carbon footprint, reduce waste, and adopt more sustainable business practices.

In conclusion, McDevitt believes that by adopting better business practices, companies can contribute to a more sustainable and equitable world. While Mike is excited to start petitioning for these changes, he hopes other major investors in the industry begin following the mindful decisions to help change our planet for good!
