ST. JOSEPH, MICHIGAN, UNITED STATES, February 6, 2023

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Tarps Now® is pleased to announce the release of its guide for consumers to determine the who, where, how, why, and especially what the Best Tarps are to Buy. The guide begins by detailing how the use of tarps can protect homes, businesses, equipment, machinery, animals and people from many types of destructive elements, such as hazardous chemicals, intense ultraviolet radiation from direct exposure to sunlight, dirt, debris, pests, and many other hazards.

The guide further outlines various fabrics used each brings their own benefits to the protection they provide. Common materials for tarps include poly, vinyl, clear vinyl, canvas, mesh, and nylon. Other features that help make a tarp productive are their thickness or denier as well as the material weight that is typically classified in weight per square yard. There are other characteristics that may be a factor in selecting the best tarp for your situation including material weave, grommet spacing, and for some the color.

Also discussed are the selection of effective materials out there. We are talking about polyethylene (poly), vinyl, canvas, mesh, and nylon. For heavy duty applications 12 Mil thick tarps are generally seen as the starting point for those looking into heavier-duty options. But this is only scratching the surface. Get ready for some serious thickness with some of these fabrics. Poly thicknesses can go up to 24 mil thick, Canvas as thick as 30 mil, while mesh and vinyl can be as thick as 50 mil. Examples include the following product types:
