One of the festival highlights will be workshops by award winning animator, Bill Plympton and a retrospective discussion on Michael Moore films which were co-produced by Jeff Gibbs who will host.

The Closing Night film will feature the new film "Sophia" an in-depth look at the most recognized humanoid robot in the world. Awards will be given out in advance of the last screening.

"With the surge in popularity of documentary and animated films in recent years, we feel that it's the perfect time to bring people back together in a safe, social setting to view these widely appealing genres", says Teddy Grouya, Director of AmDocs. "There is such a rich variety of topics, perspectives and even film styles, people who have an interest in learning about the world around them will be endlessly entertained and inspired."

AmDocs is also pleased to announce the addition of a new Associate Director, Michael Fox, who previously served as the Director for both the Mendocino Film Festival and Napa Valley Film Festival.
