Prostate cancer is a type of cancer that occurs in the prostate, a small gland in the male reproductive system. The prostate is located just below the bladder and surrounds the urethra, the tube that carries urine and semen out of the body. Prostate cancer usually develops slowly, and most men with prostate cancer do not have any symptoms. In its early stages, prostate cancer may not cause any harm and may not require treatment. However, as the cancer grows and spreads, it can cause various symptoms and health problems, including difficulty urinating, pain during ejaculation, and in severe cases, bone pain and urinary incontinence. Early detection and treatment can significantly improve the chances of successful treatment and recovery.
