Overview

The veterinary services market refers to the industry that provides medical care, treatment, and services for animals, including pets, livestock, and wildlife. The market is expected to grow in the coming years, driven by factors such as an increasing pet population, rising demand for advanced veterinary care, and growth in the livestock sector. Additionally, the increasing prevalence of zoonotic diseases, which can spread from animals to humans, is driving demand for better veterinary services and facilities. The market for veterinary services is expected to benefit from advancements in technology, such as telemedicine and the use of drones for delivery of vaccines and other medical supplies to remote areas. The market includes a range of services such as routine check-ups and vaccinations, diagnostic testing, surgical procedures, and specialized care for specific conditions.
