Market Dynamics for Veterinary drugs:

Drivers:

Pet insurance policies are in high demand:

Market growth is expected to be boosted by the increasing use of pet insurance to pay for vet services in many industrialized countries. The U.K., Sweden, and Canada all have a thriving pet insurance industry. China has seen a significant increase in pet insurance usage. Two important factors that have contributed to the rise in pet insurance adoption are the increased awareness and understanding of pet health, and the growing popularity of pets.

There are more zoonotic infections in livestock animals:

The market will see an increase in the number of zoonotic illnesses among livestock animals, which will open up new opportunities and impact market dynamics. The livestock sector accounted for more than big of the global animal pharmaceuticals market in 2022 due to the increased incidence and financial burden of zoonotic diseases among livestock animals. In addition, bacterial parasites are able to thrive on farm animals, which can lead to financial hardship and severe illness.

Restraints/Challenges:

Treatments at a high price:

With each passing day, the high cost of Veterinary drugs is increasing. It is restricting market growth because of its high cost.
