Forterra's owner, David Dance, says he and his technicians have seen an increase in service calls from residents and businesses in Arlington, which drove the decision to expand to the city. The new location will allow them to better access and service those customers.

"We're very excited about this latest expansion," Dance says. "Arlington is a growing city, and we want to make sure all residents — old and new — have access to professional pest control services. We take great pride in being able to provide these critical services to the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex."

The company also has offices in Southlake, McKinney, and Denton, TX, and they hope to be able to keep growing to help Texas residents live pest-free. They will also be expanding their initiative Dallas Bites Back in Arlington, which is a way for residents to nominate friends, family and neighbors to receive free pest control services.
