

Inventrkits (A STEM learning company) is proud to announce on National Inventors Day, It's now a Public Benefit Company

By aligning its corporate mission with its core values, Inventrkits plan impactful initiatives of inclusion in its first year as a Public Benefit Company.

PARRISH, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, February 13, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Inventrkits, PBLLC is thrilled to announce on National Inventors Day we have converted from a traditional Limited Liability Company to a Public Benefit Limited Liability Company (PBLLC) registered in Delaware.

“

Inventrkits' mission is to break down barriers to entry into STEM and empower individuals of all ages and backgrounds to be the masters of their own technology stories.”

Austin Eckman & Alex Eschenauer

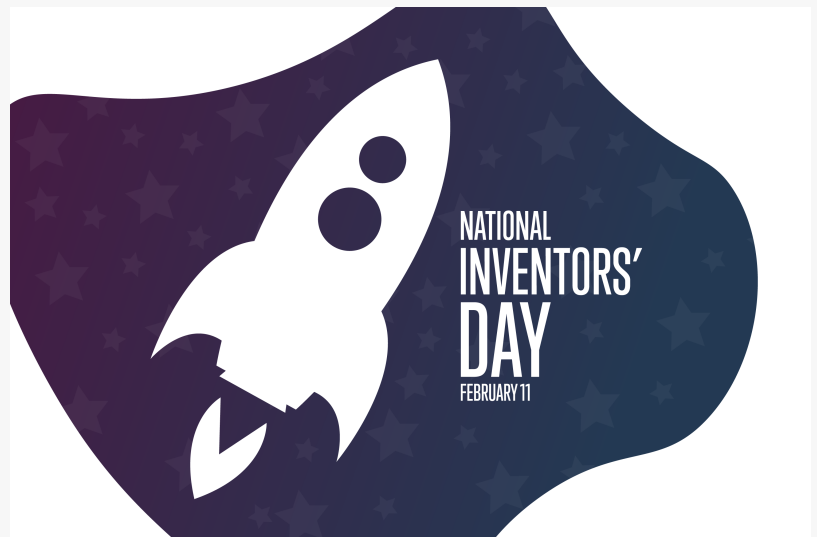

A public benefit company is created specifically to benefit the public in some way. The focus is on both profit and social mission alignment.

“Becoming a Public Benefit Company makes our charter consistent with the core values since our founding in 2019,” said Austin Eckman co-founder of Inventrkits. “This conversion represents our commitment to inspire and educate future makers of all socio-economic backgrounds, with exciting STEM products” added, co-founder Alex Eschenauer.

Grounded in a creator mentality, utilizing immersive story-telling, gamification, and a vibrant community, Inventrkits inspires students of all ages and backgrounds to become problem-solvers of the 21st century, and this is why it's apropos to make this announcement on National Inventors Day.
