

Cultures Connect in Columbus, Ohio for Black History Festival

BIDEC's free, three-day celebration brings speakers, performers, businesses, and global leaders from across the African diaspora to Downtown Columbus, Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, February 13, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In just three days, the Renaissance Hotel in Downtown Columbus, Ohio is set to transform into a hub of cultural exchange and celebration. Aligning with Black History Month, the 2nd Annual Black History Festival will offer attendees live musical performances, a curated vendor marketplace, special guest speakers from around the globe, and more in an effort to consolidate the heritage of Africa's diaspora in the United States and continental Africa.

We formed this initiative to celebrate the strong ties between the United States of America and the African Union. This is a novel opportunity to inspire Black youth to build bridges”

Stephen Selasie Asuo

From February 15th - 17th, the graces of world leaders such as the Honorable Yaw Osafo Maafo and Ursula

Owusu (key figures in the Ghanaian government) will join the curated line-up of panels and performances being offered for free to the general public. Registration is available at BlackHistoryFestivals.com.

“We formed this initiative to celebrate the strong ties between the United States of America and the African Union. This is a novel opportunity to inspire Black youth to build bridges,” shared Bureau of International Development Exchanges and Commerce (BIDEC) president Stephen Selasie Asuo.

As an advocacy and management organization, BIDEC is established with the prime objective of promoting and supporting initiatives in sustainable development, cultural and professional exchanges, industries, and trade. Stay up to date with our initiatives at BIDECOnline.com.
