Global bus markets are highly competitive. There are many established companies and new entrants competing for market share. Daimler AG, Volvo Buses and MAN Truck & Bus are the major players in this market. The market trends for the global bus market are expected to continue growing over the next few years due to factors like increasing urbanization, rising demand and investments by governments in public transport infrastructure.

In the medium-term, rising concerns about pollution and strict emission regulations prompted countries to add more electric buses to their existing bus fleets, which contributed to the growth of the bus market. The government also designed BRT systems that combine the speed and capacity of a metro with the simplicity, cost-effectiveness, and ease of bus service. The bus market is expected to grow due to the rapid growth of urban populations and increased focus on bus rapid transit (BRT).

Online ticketing will be a lucrative opportunity in the global market. In the forecast period, digital technology and apps will be used significantly. A shift in consumer profile is expected to impact consumer preference during the forecast period. Online booking is gaining popularity due to convenience, comfort, and speed.
