with its menu. The chicken options include three or four tenders, half a dozen wings, one dozen wings, or a juicy boneless chicken, all served with bread and pickles. The sides include crimson fries, mac and cheese, fried pickles, and slaw. For extras, diners' options include an add-on tender, crimson sauce, honey, pickles, and cheese.

The sandwiches are also an attraction, and guests can pick from four options. The Crimson Sandwich is made up of a boneless breast, slaw, crimson sauce, and pickles served on a brioche bun. The Garlic Twister sandwich is crimson chicken pressed on a tortilla wrap and served with pickles and garlic sauce. For a feel of home, guests can sample the home-style sandwich, which consists of crimson chicken on toasted bread and topped with American Cheese. Finally, there is the old-school-styled grilled cheese sandwich. It consists of white bread toasted with melted cheese.

The menu delights end with the house's specialty, the Joey Eat Fries. This dish consists of crimson sauce, boneless chicken breast, pickles, crimson sauce, and cheese served over crimson fries. The drinks section is a bit limited, with only fountain drinks available.

On top of using fresh chicken, Crimson Coward also meets halal chicken standards. Guests who love their chicken hot will be challenged by what is available. The restaurant offers five heat levels. The country option has no heat making it perfect for kids and those who do not love hot spices. The mild heat is for those who want a hint of the heat but not a strong taste. Things start getting hot at the medium heat level, and it is excellent for those still working their way up to the hot spicy chicken palate. At crimson-hot heat, the burn is undeniable, and most diners will quit at this point. For enthusiasts, however, the restaurant has a final level aptly named BURRRRN, BABY, BURN.
