The claims in a wrongful death lawsuit are set forth in terms of financial loss to survivors. While a victim's life is priceless, compensation can help to at least cushion the financial loss that the survivors have suffered as a result of the accident especially if the victim was the primary wage earner. The aggrieved family may therefore make claims for compensation for personal pain and suffering, as they have been deprived of the deceased's companionship, support, and love.

Similar to other personal injury lawsuits, specific monetary amounts are calculated for a variety of damages. In California, claims are based on whether they affect the estate or survivors of the deceased. The Law Office of Melinda J. Helbock works with the best wrongful death attorneys in
