In London we intend to develop a new approach to neurodegenerative diseases, and we do have a plan already in place.”

Frederic Scheer

“In London we intend to develop a new approach to neurodegenerative diseases, and we do have a plan already in place. Along our innovative work in preventative cancer medicine, we believe that patients suffering from neurodegenerative diseases need help and we believe that we have a solution. We will develop it in a state-of-the-art R&D center that will be operational by Summer 2023”. Said Frederic Scheer Alercell CEO.

The company is on an aggressive growth pattern as it is in the process of finalizing the incorporation of Alercell France SAS, an Alercell wholly owned subsidiary in Paris where it intends to expand and develop additional research and offer its cancer and leukemia diagnostic tests.

Alercell recently introduced Lena Q51®
a Leukemia diagnostic test that was developed to detect up to 51 genes mutations associated with Leukemia.
