Baby stroller demand will be driven by the development of technology in baby products that can be customized according to parents' needs. Baby stroller demand is driven by the rising disposable income and changing lifestyles. The market growth rate will also be accelerated by other significant factors like the growing trend towards traveling among baby boomers and millennials.

The market will also be positively affected by an increase in birth rates in developing countries and safety concerns. The market's growth rate will be further tempered by an increase in strollers being used for carrying children or transporting them in vehicles. Additionally, eco-friendly strollers are in high demand. The demand for baby strollers will increase due to increased adoption of prams among consumers.

The market growth rate will be affected by fluctuations in raw material prices. The market growth will also be affected by the negative effects of COVID-19 upon the supply chain. The market will be further challenged by strict government regulations and the high price of baby strollers during the forecast period.
