Hemodialysis also termed as dialysis is a process of blood purification, when human kidney fails to do so (due to kidney failure or end-stage renal diseases). In end-stage renal diseases, toxic waste products, and extra fluids are built-up in the body. There is also imbalance of salts and minerals in the blood. A hemodialysis or kidney transplant is opted in such cases. A hemodialysis machine is used to perform hemodialysis. The Component present in a hemodialysis machine are – dialyzer, a dialysis solution (sterilized mineral ions), and tubes for passing of blood and dialysis solution. The blood flows through the tubes and enters into the machine, where the waste products are removed through the filter and the blood again is passed back to the body through the tubes.
