Now, people are more open to looking into it [alternatives] and are beginning to explore the additional asset classes.”

CEO of AOG Wealth
Management*

"Just the word alternative...I think it should be more mainstream than it is, and it is actually becoming more mainstream. In the past, it was largely the domain of ultra-high-net-worth investors and institutional investors. And the average advisor, average investor, really didn't delve into it, but now with the really poor performance of 60/40 this year, some have speculated that it's [60/40] been a bad idea for quite a while. Now, people are more open to looking into it [alternatives] and are beginning to explore the additional asset classes", a quote from Frederick

Baerenz.
