In recent years, competition in the wealth management business in North America has increased with the development of new operating models in businesses and vigorous efforts of new entrants to capture a share of the world's largest market of investable assets. Banks and private firms, on the other hand, are increasingly demanding more from their wealth management advisors, thus creating huge demand for cutting-edge financial solutions that are tailored to their individual needs. Furthermore, gross wealth of North America has risen with time. According to the Capgemini World Wealth report, North America has surpassed Asia Pacific in terms of the rise in number of high-net-worth people and the speed at which their wealth has grown, for the first time since 2015. In 2020, 55% of ~1.2 million newly listed high-net-worth people were North Americans, in contrast to 39% of ~1.6 million newly listed ones in the previous year. The region accounted for 46% of the total increase in wealth within that group in 2020, up from 37% in 2019. Therefore, there would be a surge in demand for wealthtech solutions in North America during the forecast period.
