According to Donna, Brittney was just as "lovesick" for Cody as she now claims to be for Bryan. Brittney sent Cody love letters and visited him until he realized that she was too over the top, even for a man facing 23 lonely years in prison. "She became obsessed with him. Showed up at his court hearings, went to the jail, put money on his books," Donna said. "He was gonna play her along for commissary, again not proud, but she showed up for a visit one day and told him she loved him more than she loved her own child. That was finally when my son said enough."

Donna is a strong mental health advocate and believes that the system failed her son. "If they hadn't let him fall through the cracks, he wouldn't be in prison today," she said. Donna's experience with Brittney sheds light on the phenomenon of women falling in love with men in prison, a topic that Dr. Carole Lieberman explores in her bestselling book, Bad Boys: Why We Love Them, How to Live with Them and When to Leave Them.

Dr. Lieberman's radio show will also address Brittney's obsession with men in prison, and her current relationship with Bryan Kohberger. In an open letter to Brittney, published in Newsweek, Dr. Carole expressed her concerns about her behavior, stating that she should "get some psychotherapy and work on your feelings of not being lovable enough, so that you can find a 'prince' in real life."
